Is it normal for solar panels to clip?

For an instance, on 8.8% of sunny days, solar panels might clip the output of the inverter. However, clipping is not normal. The likelihood of clipping is influenced by your location (latitude) and the size of your solar panel array in relation to the inverter's AC output. Certain systems might clip, while others might not.

Can you clip in a solar inverter?

Clipping in a solar inverter shouldn't damage any components of your solar system unless it's at an excessive level. Inverter Data sheets should be used to verify how much kWDC we can feed in an inverter. For example, XYZ 100kW Solar Inverter is rated to 100kW AC Output but can take up to 140kW DC which is mentioned on its data sheet.
