Is lithium a 'significant stride' in the UK's electric vehicle manufacturing supply chain?

Cornish Lithium boss Jeremy Wrathall said it represented "a significant stride in fortifying the UK's electric vehicle manufacturing supply chain as the UK develops this vital industry". Imerys British Lithium also said it was a move being "warmly welcomed".

"It will also reduce the length of the supply chain and along with it the carbon footprint of battery production." Supply of lithium is also a concern, although two firms -- British Lithium and Cornish Lithium -- are exploring known deposits of the element in the UK in the southwest of England, which would be useful in that regard.
